

ECFC 2024 Team Roping Camp

Easter weekend, 2024, kids from all over the country saddled up for a spiritual and skills-enhancing experience at Equine Champions for Christ's Team Roping Camp. World Champion instructors Jake Barnes and Clay O'Brien Cooper, renowned for their expertise and dedication to the sport, guided aspiring ropers through drills and techniques, building teamwork and horsemanship. After a day of exhilarating practice, the campers gathered for a meaningful Easter morning sermon delivered by Pastor Ray Perryman, reflecting on the true meaning of the holiday and its connection to the passion and resilience of the rodeo spirit.

Equine Champions for Christ's Easter Team Roping Camp was a unique blend of faith, fellowship, and rodeo expertise, making it an unforgettable experience for all who participated.

Equine Champions for Christ is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization dedicated to empowering young rodeo athletes through faith and skill-building. Founded in 2008, ECfC offers clinics in all rodeo disciplines to children from around the world. Our programs help young people develop their talents, gain valuable life skills, and build strong character.

Through world class instruction, hands-on training, and a supportive Christian environment, ECfC empowers youth to achieve their full potential, both in the rodeo arena and in life. Many participants have gone on to excel in rodeo competitions, building confidence and leadership skills along the way.

ECfC's impact is undeniable. Over 2000 have been children served, changing lives and families. We are committed to continuing to make a difference in the lives of young rodeo athletes, building their skills, fostering their faith, and empowering them to reach their full potential.
